Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Tuesday 02 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cold in north, some snow. Milder, sometimes wetter further south.

This Evening and Tonight:
Further heavy rain for central Britain, snow confined to highest Pennine routes. Snow more prevalent parts of south and east Scotland, perhaps heavy. Wintry showers in far north. Drier further south before heavy rain reaches southern coastal counties of England.

Wednesday:
Snow affecting parts of Scotland, mainly the south and east. Rain across central areas easing for a while. Rain in southern England clearing leaving scattered showers and some brighter skies.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Prolonged, occasionally heavy snow likely to persist across parts of Scotland, mainly hills initially, but to lower levels later. Elsewhere mild at first with some showers, turning colder later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.